Well, if you put a CF card in an IDE adapter to make it act like a HDD in every way (that's the point of doing so), then it isn't any more (or less) removable than any other HDD. It's just flash based rather than using some magnetic media of some kind. But still a non-removable HDD...

So, a CF card in a CF2IDE adapter better report itself as non-removable, if it doesn't, then I understand there may be issues...
