you can't, as far as I can see, disable the <<default>> entry.

You can double-click it (like any other entry) to make it greyed-out. Granted that double-clicking isn't exactly obvious!

Here all entries for the default are at the default values

And what ARE those "default values"?

BTW, if I disable "default", which I assume is similar to setting it to "default values", then I do get "a somewhat OS3.1 look", and the menus then look OK, but the window scrollbars still look red.
