I copied it directly after unpacking, so no installer was involved. However, I am no longer sure that I "just" copied everything or copied "newer" only.

When I was trying to get it all working again, I noticed that z.library was an old version (V53.1 in the archive), but replacing it didn't fix it. The current version is V53.6.

Since I need the machine for development work, I didn't really spend time trying to find out why. I reinstalled from scratch, copied over an old backup, then used AmiUpdate to get back up to date.
